About the Fabric

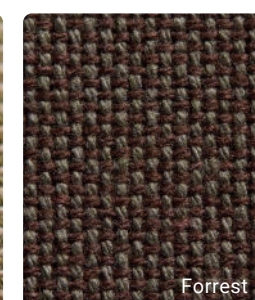

Our choice of fabric from Fabraa is based on the extra sustainability of the cotton yarns, as they are not dyed. The yarns are processed from post-industrial cotton waste, giving the material a second life. Due to this production process, each batch is unique and colour deviations may occur.

This flatwoven fabric may show slight variations due to the mechanical recycling process. During use, a certain hairiness may occur; however, this does not affect the durability of this fabric.

Balancing feminine softness and masculine structure

With the launch of the new fabric, we're also introducing our Extend Free Standing Flex, a dynamic room divider designed for flexibility.

The Free Standing Flex allows you to subtly adjust and reposition the space, creating zones without compromising openness. Its panel design makes each configuration unique, while the high-quality materials ensure durability and timeless appeal.

With panels upholstered in the new fabric, you can move them around to create extra screening exactly where it's needed, making the system even more versatile and tailored to your space. The look is a soft twist on the traditional New Yorker wall, where feminine softness meets masculine structure, a balance that is both dynamic and inviting.

Color choices that define the space

With just a few adjustments, the expression of the room can change completely. In this setting, we focused on highlighting the simplicity of the system and the impact of the light colors we offer. While the first environment featured an organic, bold setup in black metal and black fabric, here we show how light panels can both provide screening and serve as visual highlights within the space.

Create you own expression

Are you aiming for an organic or a more structured room divider? Which colors suit your project best? Here, we've selected four timeless shades that stand in beautiful contrast to our metals in Black and Silver Grey. Of course, it's also possible to dive into the design process together and create something truly unique and choose you own fabric and colors.
